For Immediate Release - Friday, September 9, 2011

ATLANTA – Fresenius Medical Care, the Advocates for Responsible Care, and Grady Health System are pleased to announce that starting today, 21 dialysis patients will resume their regular treatment schedule. In an effort to reach this solution providing immediate, high-quality dialysis care for these patients, Fresenius and Grady Health System negotiated the agreement with urgency commensurate to gravity of the situation. The previous agreement expired on August 31, 2011.

The contract, which was signed yesterday, is a three-year agreement with the possibility of extensions. Fresenius and Grady Health System committed to mutually cooperate to ensure that all 21 patients will receive outpatient dialysis treatments through Fresenius dialysis centers.

“After one week of these patients going through the anxiety of not knowing whether they will receive the dialysis they need to survive, I am overjoyed that Fresenius and the Grady Health System have reached this agreement,” stated Dorothy Leone-Glasser, president of the board of directors for Advocates for Responsible Care. She continued, “These 21 patients absolutely breathed a collective sigh of relief upon learning of the agreement.”

Fresenius spokeswoman Jane Kramer emphasized, “We worked tirelessly to forge partnerships in the community with compassionate medical professionals affiliated with the excellent medical institutions in Greater Atlanta who share our highest concerns about patient care. Fresenius and Advocates for Responsible Care will continue to work to reach a long-term, community-wide solution to ensure that all 21 patients continue to receive the medical care they need.”
